Teesha just started her first year and already she is swamped with schoolwork. Hitting up a party with her new friend Kim and some cute dates they met at Orientation Week seemed like the perfect de-stressor until everything changed that night...

“Being a student leader in residence, I’ve seen Mixed Messages, I’ve seen this program multiple times. I still find it effective and a necessary event for first-year students new to the city to participate. I find a lot of students don’t expect these realistic situations occur in residence/general life, so it’s great to open their eyes.”

Mixed Messages uses Forum Theatre to create a dialogue about sexual assault on a college/university campus and the grey areas that exist as we navigate new relationships while under the influence of alcohol and drugs.

In a Forum Theatre production, audience members are invited onto the stage by a trained facilitator after the performance to enact “an intervention” where they can step into a scene and replace a character to change the story for the better. Through open and supportive Forum Theatre facilitation, students will have the opportunity to share and explore strategies in a safe artistic environment. Mixed Messages uses Forum Theatre to asks students to discuss: “What could have been said or done differently so that things didn’t end this way for Teesha and others?”
